It is with great sadness that we must note the passing of Professor Peter Ucko during the final editing of this book. Peter's personal energy, intellect and efforts were crucial to the foundation of the International Centre for Chinese Heritage and Archaeology (University College London and Peking University), and the organisation of a conference on fieldwork training in archaeology that brought together an international cohort of scholars and teachers. Without his leadership of the Centre (ICCHA) and conference, and his dedication to international collaboration and communication, this book, with editions in both English and Chinese, would not exist. We can regard this book as a material memorial to Peter's vision for the ICCHA and the international discussion of the practices of archaeology. It should serve us as a signpost on the road which Peter charted for us to pursue in the continuing development of the ICCHA.
